

As Truman, I would set my heart to escaping from the artificial, staged world. This is because the real world gives so many opportunities and memories as well as real choices and real friendships that simply don't exist as he lives now. Truman has a free will to live as he wishes and those rights have already been pushed far over the limit by the show director. In this world, Truman is helpless and controlled for money (from the TV show), everything is a lie - even his neighbours and friends/family are not real yet these sorts of relationships are the most important in a happy life. This is not only wrong but is also physiologically damaging. Truman hasn't learnt how to live in the real world, he doesn't know about injustice, death, global warming etc and the positives of life, the small things everyday that make you smile and feel good about yourself. This is why I think Truman should get out as quickly as he can, escape from a lie. The sooner he escapes, the younger he will be when he learns the realities and values of life and the easier it will be for him to adjust. No human should have to endure such a terrible thing as this without their full consent when they are clear in the mind and understand the full consequences. Even since the beginning of the world in the Garden of Eden, humans had free will, so does Truman...
